THE PRESIDENT IU/ INTERNATIONAL CHRITSIAN UNIVERSITY

Dear Chief Guest; Prof. Everett Sitanda, Captain Dr. Heinz Strupler; esteemed members of the board; faculty leaders, staffs, students; family and friends; and especially the graduating class of 2009,

Garry Trudeau once said, “Commencement speeches were invented largely in the belief that outgoing college students should never be released into the world until they have been properly sedated.” Unfortunately some commencement speeches do provide that sedation, but it is my hope that my comments today will be both brief and interesting enough to keep the sedate rather light and short lived.

Congratulations students on reaching this major milestone in your life. Today is at least a partial payday for all the days, weeks, months, and years that you have worked so hard. The early morning classes, the long nights of study, the endless and sometimes tedious lectures, the thousands of pages of reading, the hundreds of pages of writing, the discipline of having to come to class on time, the discipline of living and attending to your midterm and class quizzes, and the discipline of paying your college bill has partially come to an end in the pursuance of the degree and diplomas you are receiving today. In a few moments when you take the diploma into your hands I would remind you that this little piece of paper celebrates discipline, work, perseverance, achievement and success. So let your heart be merry, let your day be full of congratulations and celebrations and when the fireworks have settled down, take a few quiet moments and thank God that He brought you to PaulMark College and has given you His grace and the opportunities that led to your being here today.

As you leave PaulMark a place of learning, as you leave the tussle of monthly assignments, as you leave your friends and lecturers, as you leave the grounds of PaulMark which is dedicated to God and the training of his people, let me take this one last chance to remind you of where you will need to keep your focus as you go out to face your future and put your hand to the plow of God’s work for your life; “From here you are going to write your own history—choice by choice, decision by decision.” If your history is to glorify God and someday be of worth, the choice is yours. Recollect all that you have received from your Lecturers, learnt through interactions and obtained by your able means, put them together and be of help to that person who now needs you and has confidence in you. Always remember this; your papers of quality will be tested by your production. So I say to you today, never give up, never give up. When the battle goes hard, never, never give in. When the road looks long, don’t take a shortcut. There are no shortcuts which leads to any place worth going.

You may not always be able to control what is happening around you, but you can control your response to the problems. You don’t need to give in or quit. Art Link letter said it best, when he said, “Things turn out best for the people who make the best out of the way things turn out.”

So press on to the end. Persevere through the dark days and nights and be assured that God will never leave you nor forsake you. Keep writing that history and make it worth reading. Keep praying, stay fuel for life, keep the ministry to the people as your focus, and then persevere to finish the line. I am the President of the University, but there is the President of the Universe who stands ready to present you with a diploma stamped with the words, “Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord.”

President; Prof. Goodheer

Dr H. Strupler.

The Chief guest; Professor Everret Sitanda, students of PaulMark College, the grandaunts, other distinguished guests ladies and gentlemen.

I want to take this opportunity to thank every one of you seated here today and sharing in this very important occasion for our college and our graduating students. My trip from Zurich Switzerland was very pleasant cruising over twenty four thousand feet above the sea level with one mind; to come to Kisumu and share in the achievement of PaulMark College..

I also want to take this lone and highly favored opportunity to thank Dr. Good-heer of the International Christian University for the tireless efforts he has made in ensuring that these students clad in graduation qualify with a quality paper backed by their total input effort.

It is a great pleasure to be with you today at your first graduation ceremony after the validation of the college programs. After all, it is a day of joy for everyone:

You graduates have no more exams or classes to endure. And I might say, the faculty no longer has you to endure; you have fame and fortune ahead of you; your families and spouses and friends can look forward to seeing more of you perform great things for them and for your country

I realize we have gathered here today to applaud those of you who will be receiving degrees. I suggest, however, that there are several heroes and heroines here today who should be recognized and with whom you graduate would like to share your glory. Our brother Professor Sitanda, our sister Prof. Wangare Mwai are some of these academic darlings we all must recognize. The directors who direct the affairs of this college and the lecturers who have seen you through in your academic pursuit which now results to this occasion are also to be recognized.

I personally have tried to keep myself generally informed about what happens at PaulMark College and my brother Rev. Nathan Ondego has been in constant touch with me keeping me abreast with the academic performance of this school..

Bridge building is a task. The leaders of PaulMark have had to build this bridge so that you all can follow and get to the other side without catching dirt. The school and its faculty have tried to build a bridge for you to your lives henceforth. I am confident they have succeeded and that you graduates not only have crossed that bridge but perhaps will build some of your own for others to cross. Today I would like to encourage you to do so.

Kenya is a nation built on pride in sacrifice and commitment to shared values and on a willingness of the citizens to give of their time and energy for the good of the whole Nation. I hope that some of you graduates will yourselves go on to spending part or all of your lives in public service. Indeed, for all the good that can be done by citizens who volunteer, or become involved in political affairs in other ways, the simple truth is that Kenya needs hardworking, innovative, dedicated people to devote their working lives to its operation and improvement. Kenya is a great nation today because those bridge builders have made strong foundations for you Graduands so that now you can allow Kenyans to pass through your hands to a better future.

To be sure, the work of bridge building can be as taxing as it is rewarding. These efforts can call for sacrifice and sometimes emotional, sometimes financial, sometimes personal. Those who choose the life of public service open themselves to public review. There is a wonderful little story told about a president of a country long ago.

When he became the president, he became quite discouraged when his attempts to promote economic recovery during the Great Depression seemed to make little headway. However the President expressed his discouragement noting that he was particularly disturbed that, in spite of all of his efforts, his critics were becoming ever more vocal and belligerent. Nevertheless his aide comforted him; Don't expect to see calves running in the field the day after you put the bull to the cows. But the President replied; "but I would at least expect to see some contented cows."

This is how bridge builders get lost in the pursuit for excellence. Anyone who has worked in public service knows that the fight never seems easy while it is being waged. You cannot expect that your efforts will meet with immediate success. But the ever-present understanding that you are a part of something bigger than yourself, and that your efforts are paving the way for those who will follow, makes a life of public service worth the bumps along the way. A single generation of public servants cannot bridge all the gaps of inequality and injustice nor span the chasms of your country. But if we focus our energies on sharing ideas, finding solutions and using what is right with Kenya to remedy what is wrong with it, we can make a difference. Your degree obtained today should be the tool to measure these mishaps. Your nation needs bridges, and bridges are built by those who look to the future and dedicate themselves to helping others. I don't know what the future holds, but I know who holds the future: It is you. Commit yourselves today, as you embark on your new life as a PaulMark graduate, to being a bridge builder. We need you, and those who cross the bridges you build will thank you. Congratulations!!

To the Commission of Higher Education of Kenya

To whom it may concern:

Greetings from The International University (IU)!

IU would be pleased and honored to operate an academic program in conjunction with the ICW in Kenya.

Please find information below concerning IU's status:

- In Austria IU holds the status of a non-governmental institution offering programs comparable to Austrian institutions. (See enclosed statement and translation). This status fits IU's emphasis on career-oriented training and its use of faculty with a combination of academic and professional expertise (as opposed to only tenured academicians). IU also emphasizes a Christian world view in its academic programs.
- IU is registered as a not-for-profit educational corporation in the United States in Florida and Alabama, with approval of the stated purpose of offering educational programs on the Bachelor's, Master's and Doctorate levels. An additional level of Alabama State Licensing is being sought and the application should be completed by 15 March 2006. (See enclosed Apostille).
- IU's programs are accredited by the Tunisian Ministry of Higher Education, Scientific Research and Technology. (See enclosure).
- IU's Kiev program (a filial of IU-Vienna) is fully recognized by the Ukrainian Ministry of Education (see enclosure).
- IU partners with a number of fully-accredited institutions around the world, including offering a dual-degree Master's program with Waynesburg College (University) in Pennsylvania, and study-abroad programs with Azusa Pacific University and Seattle Pacific University. (See enclosed documentation).

THE INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY

IU's undergraduate programs are based on the American educational system, requiring a core of General Education courses to strengthen students' life skills (e.g. Philosophy, Sociology, Psychology, Literature, and History), followed by a strong core of Major courses in Business Administration or Diplomatic Studies, and then elective courses to strengthen the students' academic program. On the Master's level, only courses in Business or Diplomatic Studies are required.

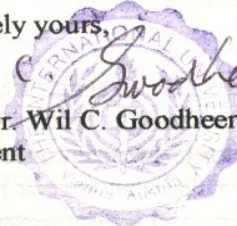

IU has over 25 years of experience in transforming the lives of students from over 100 different countries and opening further educational and career opportunities for them. In addition, IU also provides generous tuition-waiver scholarships for needy students. Currently we are serving a number of students from Kenya and are pleased to help prepare them not only for their future, but to benefit the future of their country.

Please let me know if I can provide any additional information.

Thanking you in advance for your consideration and hoping for a positive outcome, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Prof. Dr. Wil C. Goodheer
President

Validation Ceremony Held at the Commission for Higher Education Head Quarters

We applied for validation of our theology and Business Education programs in 2005. We were given a temporal approval pending Quality survey and inspections.

In the year 2008 we passed the quality assurance inspections and we were invited among other institutions at the Commission for Higher Education (CHE) for a colorful ceremony of handing over of certificates officiated by the Honorable assistant Minister for Education.

The college Finance Director, Rev. Nathan Ondego flanked by Rev. Sedera of Nairobi and Pastor Onyango the college Principal display the validation certificates and a certificate for Authority to collaborate for Degree course outside the commission offices soon after they were granted. The issuance of the validation certificates indicates that at PaulMark we offer quality courses and that the courses so offered can be accepted worldwide for credit transfers or promotion to next grades.

The Commission Secretary, Professor Sitanda takes through the Minister and the members of the Commission together with the institutions/colleges that received certificates for validation and letters of authority. Although it was colorful day for the participants, the result was a benefit to any Kenyans and other students worldwide who chose to take education at any college that offer validated programs.

Kenya has become competitive in education and many colleges are mushrooming that take on unsuspecting parents and students. The Government was set to regulate the education industry in Kenya, whatever it takes. Said Professor Sitanda.

Members, of the Commission for Higher education pose for a photo after issuing the validation certificates for colleges at their offices. The Chairman of the commission reminded the college members and leaders of various college to keep the standards. In his speech, the Chairman told the audience to know that; peoples mind work like a computer. It needs a good program to run a good result.
